Harold:

When I first wrote my monograph on the misaligned sight, I thought that I had cut it down to the bone. Here you have it trimmed to the marrow. I hope that it is satisfactory for your purposes. Ifind it inadequate, but it is the best that I can do in a short time.

As I go over evidence related to the cartridge cases, favorable signs continue to appear. It may be very signif-icant that Frazier compared ony photos of the dented primers of the cartridges; that is, only where the firing pin struck. Inexamining the revolver cartridges, Cunningham photographed the whole base of the cartridges. I'll explain the significance later.

It's late, and I have to stop.
